

The story of Osiris (pages 22–23)

1 2c – 1 mark for all numbers correctly ordered:

Isis made the first mummy. 4

Set plotted to get rid of Osiris. 1

Osiris came back to life and lived in peace. 5

Set chopped Osiris' body into small pieces. 3

Isis set out to search for her husband. 2

2 2h – 1 mark for developed answers including two pieces of evidence from text: Osiris is a wise king. He teaches his people how to live in peace and to understand the gods./Set is evil and jealous. He sets out to remove his brother from his kingdom by killing him./When Osiris comes back to life, he lives in peace and grants people with happy hearts a place in his kingdom./Set imprisons Isis so she can't search for her husband.

3 2d – 1 mark. Only the king's body fitted the chest./Set ordered a beautiful wooden chest to be made to the king's measurements.

4 2d – Award 2 marks, one for each correct answer. Any two of the following: Isis was heroic and strong-minded. She was determined to find her husband./She was clever – she managed to outwit the guards and escape./Isis was a loving wife. It took her years to find her husband's body./She pieced his body together.

5 2e – Award up to 3 marks for fully developed answers referring to the text with reasons: Yes. Osiris was a kind and wise king. He wanted peace and taught people the ways of the gods. When he returned he lived in a peaceful land and judged people's actions. He would have forgiven his brother because he was his family./No, because when he returned, he judged people by their actions. Those whose hearts were heavy with bad deeds were fed to a hungry monster, so that's what might have happened to Set.

Award up to 2 marks for developed answers: Yes, because he wanted people to live and work together so he might have given Set another chance./No, because he fed bad people to a monster so he probably fed Set to it too.

Award 1 mark for undeveloped answer: Yes, because he was a kind person./No, because he fed bad people to a monster.
